1. On 12 June 1954 there were six gun emplacements in the area immediately northwest of the Ch'ient'ang (6929/1048) River Bridge in Hangchow. The gun barrels appeared to be large, extending about two meters off the ground, and they made a 60-degree angle with the ground. Tree leaves camouflaged the rear portions of these guns.
2. Strict security was maintained in this area by Chinese Communist army guards.¹
